

NPC Unlimited Announces Release of Sunday Search

Seattle, WA – August 1, 2008 - NPC Unlimited is pleased to announce the introduction of Sunday Search, a game to remind yourself of the quiet times. A classic Sunday paper puzzle, circle all of the words in a grid of letters. An added bit of fun comes from finding words created by accident. This game comes in Time Trial, and Un-timed modes to match your mood. The graphics and sounds are designed to be pleasant, and remind you of a sunny day in the kitchen with nothing to do but relax. A free one hour trial of Sunday Search is available at the NPC Unlimited <http://www.npcunlimited.com> web site, or purchase for $19.95.

Sunday Search is available for Macintosh (OSX 10.5).

Talking about the graphic idea for Sunday Search NPC Unlimited Artist Jim Hicks said “I just imagined the most relaxing place I could, and ended up at my kitchen table with a Sunday newspaper.” Discussing Sunday Search, NPC Unlimited Co-Founder Hasan Edain said, “I started this game as a way to let off a little stress, and it worked so well that we decided everyone should have a chance to relax like this.”

Sunday Search was written in Java using Sprite2D, an open source framework for writing 2 dimensional sprite-based games. Sprite2D was written by NPC Unlimited.
